

Neil Howard Telecoms partners with Voice Flex to provide SIP

Blackburn, Lancashire – December 10th, 2007: Neil Howard Telecoms today announced that they have partnered with Voice Flex to provide SIP to Neil Howard Telecoms customers and prospects.

Voice Flex is a brand name of Frontier Systems Limited. Frontier was formed in 1998 and has experienced strong but steady growth since. Initially formed to provide IT consultancy and IT services, the company added a development team in 2000, moving in to voice switching in 2003.

The Voice Flex platform has been developed from scratch in-house during 2005, with the commercial launch in December 2005. Since then the growth path has been rapid. Voice Flex is now the principle supplier of SIP trunks to the channel.

Howard Jones, Managing Director at Neil Howard Telecoms “We are delighted to partner with Voice Flex. IP Telephony is new and reliable technology to complement the new IP phone systems in the marketplace. There is a need to provide Session Initiation Protocol (SIP) for companies willing to be more cost-effective as well as to offer their employees the option to become mobile workers without having to pay for any bills as SIP enables them to invoice the company direct.”
